BOARD OF CONTROL AND THE
DRINK PROBLEM DRINK PROBLEM.

Speaking on some aspects of the drink probleb in London last night, Lord d'Abernon, Chairman of the Central Control Board, claimed that the policy of the Board, in discouraging drinking and drinking apart from meals, had been attended with successful results. After quoting comparative statistics, his lordship said, apart from all questions of more or less speculative interpretation, the main fact in the figures was perfectly clear that as a result of the measures which restricted sales of alcoholic beverages with a minmum of interferance with their reasonable and legitimate use, it had been possible to bring about a reduction of the more serious manifestations of intemperance such as no previous efforts in this direction had even remotely approached. That was a result he thought not only gratifying in itself, but full of encouragement for future prospects of reform, providing it was based upon a scientific and impartial study of facts.

Sir Edward Carson was informed by the Prime Minister that he would make his promised statement about registration and the duration of the present Parliament to morrow. A little laugh arose on Mr. McKenna's resolution in Ways and Means covering his new proposals for charging income tax on insurance premiums. Several members complained that they could not understand it, and asked why it had not been placed on the notice paper. could not understand it, and asked why it had not been placed on the notice paper. But on the Chancellor's explaining that it was due to lack of time, as he was in a hurry to get the Finance Bill through owing to his powers being nearly exhausted, they allowed the resolution to pass.

mr. Long gave an account of the working of the Local Government Board for the past year, and paid a high tribute to the local authorities for the practical way in which they had carried out the extra duties imposed upon them by national registration and the Military Service Acta.

Some comment has been passed on the lack of a vote of thanks by Parliament to the officers and men taking part in the Jutland battle. The Duke of Rutland, in the House of Lords to-morrow, will ask if the Government intends to move that the thanks of Parliament be tendered to Sir John Jellicoe and the officers and men to the Grand Fleet.

REGISTER.

Lord Lansdowne's speech in the House of lords last night, says The Times, strengthened the growing impression that a considerable interval must elapse before the Amending Bill is passed into law. It is hoped that the bill will be introduced before Parliament rises for the summer recess, but there is little expectation of the making of any considerable progress with it until the autumn. THE SOUTHERN UNIONISTS

THE SOUTHERN UNIONISTS.

Lord Midleton writes to The, Times to-day:—
The Prime Minister yesterday stated in the House of Commons that "up till now we have not received any specific proposals from the Unionists of the South and West of Ireland, though they have been invited to make them."
This remark, if left without comment, may lead to misconception. In the course of the negotiations Mr. Lloyd George invited me to bring representatives of the Southern Unionists to meet him, and a conference took place, at which he informed us that his proposals involved (1) a temporary settlement during the war, with the establishment of a Home Rule Parliament;
(2) the reconsideration of the whole Irish position after the war with that of the Empire at large. In connection with this scheme, he desired us to put forward proposals for the protection of Southern Unionists, and made certain suggestions himself. The Unionists of the South and West have carefully deliberated on the whole position. They are convinced that a Home Rule Parliament cannot be established during the war without grave danger to the

GERMANY FROM WITHIN.

GERMANY FROM WITHIN.

A Daniah letter, written from Germany, and published in The Times, gives the following account of the position in Germany. The English and French papers freely sold here reveal a good deal of ignorance on the food situation. The Allies should realise at once that Germany is not starving, our mear starving—but merely uncomfortable. There is complete disbelief in the British and French push, of which the public are told very little. It is regarded by the mobe as John Bull's last kick, and certain indisprest newspaper utterances in London have given the impression that the English are ready for peace. Whether that is the opinion of the higher officials I cannot say, as, for obvious reasons. I studiously avoid discussing the war with them. The Consorship of letters is stricter than ever. The Allies should not be imposed upon by the silence of submarines and Zeppelins. They may not be used for the same kind of work as 'hitherto, but they are being constructed with as much industry as before.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

Business (says The Times) was decidedly more active on the Stock Exchange yesterday, the number of bargains recorded rising from 3,100 to 3,840, the highest total registered this year. Gilt-edged and other Investment Stocks were weaker, owing to the further rise in discount rates, and the prospect of a higher bankrate in the near future. The Home Railway market, however, continued in the ascendar, and Textile Shares developed marked strength on the excellent results announced by the English Sewing Cotton Company, the shares of which rose by nearly 6s. Associated Cements were also prominently firm.

CONTALMAISON AND TRONES WOOD RETAKEN.

500 PRISONERS CAPTURED.

In his communiqué yesterday afternoon Sir Douglas Haig was able to announce the recapture of the village of Containaison, which was carried after a brilliant assault by our troops. Notwithstanding strong counter-attacks by the enemy, the village remains in British hands.

The greater portion of the Bois de Mametz is also now in occupation of British troops. Heavy aghting is proceeding in Trones Wood. In these actions our troops took nearly 500 prisoners, as well as some gans. Last night's British report very definitely states that the whole German first system of defence on a front of 14.000 yards is now in our hands. It is also stated that Trones Wood, or nearly all of it, has been retaken from the Germans. Prisoners to date number 7,500.

During the last two days our French Allies in the fighting on the Somme took 1,300 prisoners. There has been a good deal of aghting in Verdum region. The Germans gained a looting in advanced French trenches at Fumin Wood, but were immediately expelled.

THE LATE REBELLION.

MR. GINNELL AND THE

LORDS AND THE STATE OF IRELAND.

HARDINGE COMMISSION REPORT DISCUSSED.

MILITARY FORCE AND DEFENCE OF REALM REGULATIONS TO BE MAINTAINED.

> LORD LANSDOWNE'S IMPORTANT DECLARATION.

PERFECT CONFIDENCE IN GENERAL MAXWELL.

CARRYING OF ARMS TO BE PROHIBITED.

Lord Ancaster, in the House of Lords yesterday, called attention to the report on the causes of the late Irish rebellion, and argued that the Government had absolutely failed to appreciate the position of things in Ireland. It was extraordinary that Mr. Birrell, who had been found primarily responsible, should have been allowed to go virtually unscathed.

Viscount Peel argued that the findings of the report should make them chary about accepting the proposals of the Government for an Irish settlement. He asked how the new Irish Government were going to disarm the Volunteers. Was it a condition of the settlement that there should be a complete amnesty for the rebels?

Lord Crewe spoke of the Government's policy in Ireland as one which, if successful, would be called masterly inactivity, but which, if it failed, as it had done, was put down to neglect and weakness. The object had been to prevent conflict. The refraining from doing more was entirely deliberate. He could not enlarge upon the outlines of the scheme of settlement sketched by Mr. Asquith. Meanwhile there was a large military force in Ireland, and the Defence of the Realm Regulations would remain in force as long as necessary.

Viscount Midleton contended that it was not the machinery of government that had broken down, but the men who administered it. He demanded to know whether General Maxwell at present had a free hand in Ireland, and whether "Sinn Feiners" had been reinstated in the Land Commission.

Lord Wimborne admitted that there was ground for doubt as to the success of the experiment of settlement, but said it would be unfortunate if it were definitely abandoned.

Lord Lansdowne, in bringing the debate to a close, stated that during the period pending the passing of the Amending Act care would be taken to preserve order in Ireland. The Government had complete confidence in Sir John Maxwell, who would have the assistance of 40,000 soldiers, and the Defence memy's first system of defence on a front of 14,000 yards. This system of defence consisted of numerous and continuous lines of fire trenches, support trenches, and reserve trenches extending to various depths of from 2,000 to 4,000 yards, and included five strongly fortified villages, numerous heavily wired and entrenched woods and a large number of immensely strong redoubts.

The capture of each of these trenches represented an operation of some importance, and the whole of them are now in our hands.

The German's success in their recapture of from Minister assaults, was of short duration. To day we have recaptured nearly the whole of this wood, and all but the northernmost end is again in our hands.

Apart from a number of guns hidden in houses, buried by debris, etc., we have in the course of these operations brought in twenty-six field guns, one hards gun, one anti-aircraft gun, and a heavy howitzer, while the number of German prisoners captured exceeds a heavy howitzer, while the number of German prisoners captured exceeds a heavy howitzer, while the number of German prisoners captured exceeds a heavy howitzer, while the number of German prisoners captured exceeds a heavy howitzer, while the number of German prisoners captured exceeds a heavy howitzer, while the number of German prisoners captured exceeds a heavy howitzer, while the number of German prisoners captured exceeds a heavy howitzer, while the number of German prisoners captured exceeds a heavy howitzer, while the number of German prisoners captured exceeds a heavy howitzer, while the number of German prisoners captured exceeds a how the first form the first form

MANY IRISH OFFICERS UNIONIST OPPOSITION TO IRISH SETTLEMENT. IN THE LISTS. Last night's casualty lists show the follow-ing losses:—Officers—Dead, 74; wounded and missing, 146. Men—Dead, 181; wounded and missing, 444.

The Parliamentary Correspondent of the Daily Telegraph states that quite a sensation was caused among members of all shades of politics by the remarkable speech on the Irish situation delivered by the Marquis of Lansdowne in the House of Lords last night. In the House of Commons the Unionist opposition to the proposed Home Rule settlement is increasing. Between eighty and ninety members have joined the Imperial Committee, of which the Marquis of Salisbury is Chairman, thus following the example of many leading Peers outside the Government. It is proposed to issue a manifesto at an early date.

HUTCH SURPRISE. Lord Lansdowne's frank statement and yesterday afternoon created the stonishment after the reserve and retie Not for the first time an important declaration of Government intentions was communicated first of all to the House of Lords. The most interesting thing in Lord Lansdowne's speech was his announcement that the carrying of arms by civilians in Ireland, without a permit, is to be prohibited. This prohibition will be all-embracing. In some respects, the rigour of martial law is to be mitigated, and an Irish Minister responsible to Parliament is to be associated with Sir John Maxwell in the government of the country during the interval that will elapse before self-government begins. Then we powers bestowed on resident magastrates will not be reliabed by Irish members, and the only thing to be said about this change is that it is an improvement on the untempered rule of the soldiers. BEFORE HOME RULE.

The Political correspondent of the Daily Mail writes.—The date of the introduction of the Irish settlement bill remains uncertain. Any suggestion that it should be introduced soon, but discussed in detail only after the holidays, would be bitterly resented in Ireland, and would be generally regarded as another concession to the principle of "grouse as usual" for M.P.'s—this time, at the expense of Ireland. The few Unionist obstructors of the settlement plan made another move resisciaty, when they handed in a motion thanking the Commission on the rebellion in Ireland for its impartial report, in the hope of getting a day for a discussion of the report. They will not have this opportunity.

THE AMENDING BILL.

Reference has been made to the Amending Bill, which is now in course of preparation. It is a bill which in some points will make structural alterations in the Act of 1914, which is already on the Statute Book, and which will, therefore, be permanent and enduring in its character. It will contain temporary provisions dealing with the House of Commons, which it is proposed to set up in the near future. Some of those provisions may be indirectly connected with the subject we are for discussion until another time. The government of Ireland cannot be allowed to remain for an indefinite time in its present condition. (Hear, hear.) The bill which we are pledged to introduce is a bill which will take some time to prepare, and, no doubt, some time to pass through both Houses of Parliament. What we have to consider, and what it is urgent to consider, is, what is to be the government to administer Irish affairs in the interim, and in the immediate future, before the new bill can possibly pass into law. I say this with a certain amount of confidence.

consider, is, what is to be the government to administer Irish affairs in the interim, and in the immediate future, before the new bill can possibly pass into law. I say this with a certain amount of confidence.

Under the system which exists at the moment there ought not to be much fear of the situation in Ireland getting out of hand. We have Sir J. Maxwell responsible, with some 40,000 treeps to support him, and with the control of the Royal Irish Constabulary in his hands, we have unabated confidence in Sir J. Maxwell, and will give him all the support to which he is entitled. I am not aware of any case in which Sir J. Maxwell's hands have been tied by any restrictions calculated to diminish his authority or to interfere with his action. The powers he is exercising, and which were conferred on him by the Defence of the Realm Act, are powers which we are prepared to extend, if necessary, to meet any special emergency which may arise. The Government realise the gravity of the situation, and will take the steps that may be necessary to mose it. While Sir J. Maxwell enjoy our entire confidence, we feel we cannot look forward for an indefinite period to leaving the Government of Ireland as it stands at present. There is no Lord Lieutenaux, no Chief Secretary, and no representative of the Irish Government in either House of Parliament, and our hope is that we may be able—I am unable to suggest a data—to appoint an Irish Minister who will be responsible to Parliament, and it will, no doubt, be necessary that he should have alongwide of him a capable military officer with sufficient force to maximain unquiestioned order. We fally intend that the Delence of the Beath Act aboutd re-

Vigour! for weakly bodies and tired brains. IN VITAFER, there is vigour for the weak; brightness for the nervous and depressed; concentration for those who cannot "get going" at business; and rest for the sleepless.

In these conditions, Vitafer effects a quick and marvellous improvement by reconstructing, not by stimulating. Vitafer is rich in the phosphorus-bearing tomics which renew worn out nerves and restore energy and self-control, while in protein, 1 part equals 6 parts of meat.

And all the great good in Vitafer is in a form which weak digestions can easily absorb. It is pleasing to Vitafer contains nothing to disagree with delicate persons; it is of great benefit to children who worsery over school work, and for bringing on those who are physically backward.

Buy a tin of Vitafer to-day and feel how quickly it benefits. Whether you suffer from long-standing Neurasthenia or temporary debility, a short course will effect rapid improvement.
